Malicious advertising, known as malvertising, is when cybercriminals use ads to spread malware or use ads to trick users into providing sensitive information. When browsing a webpage, if you click on a malicious ad, you may be taken to a phony login page or a fake retail website that will ask for your sensitive information.

Some malvertising can even download malicious files onto your system.

Follow these tips to stay safe from harmful ads:

*Think before you click! If something seems too good to be true, it probably is. *Stay up-to-date with security patches on your device and your browser.

*Install a reputable ad blocker for your browser. Ad blockers help protect you from malvertising by preventing ads from being displayed.
