Buyer Beware: Flood-damaged cars for sale. The floodwaters from last year's hurricanes receded months ago, but could still affect used car buyers across the nation. That's because storm—damaged cars are sometimes cleaned up and taken out of state for sale. You might not know a vehicle is damaged until you or a mechanic check it out. Here's what to do: Look for water stains, water, sand or silt under the carpet, floor mats and wheel well where the spare is stored. Look for fogging in the headlights. Do a smell test for a heavy smell of disinfectant. Get a vehicle history report if possible. Inspect the car's electrical components for water contamination. Report fraud to your auto insurance company.

As our world becomes more complex with new technology and more efficient ways of getting things done, so do new scams. Now the scammers are saying they represent the IRS, technical support, or even distant relatives. Most often these requests would be made to you by a method other than the telephone. Some of these requests, such as requests for technical support, would be made by you rather than others. What can you do? Establish another method of contact (cell phone number, alternate email address, etc.,) that is not publicly available. Check your computer and mobile devices for malware. Check for suspicious charges to your credit card. In other words, be aware of your accounts.

Is a winter blizzard in our forecast?
 There should be no worries with the proper preparation. Be sure to carry a survival kit in your car that contains: blankets/sleeping bags; flashlight with extra batteries; knife; non-perishable food; a can and waterproof matches to melt snow for drinking water; sand or cat litter; shovel, windshield scraper, tool kit, tow rope, jumper cables, water container, compass, road maps, extra winter clothes, and boots.
